

ABSTRACT

An access system includes: browser software 14a for accessing information data inputted and acquiring and reading an address
5 of information data; a storage section 24 for storing a specific information data address; an address replacement section 22 for replacing the address of the inputted information data with the specific information data address stored in the storage section 24 according to a trigger signal
10 received from the IP network 3; and an access section 23 for accessing the address specified by the browser software 14a or the address replaced by the address replacement section. Thus, the service providing side can control the redirect execution.